

CENTER FOR GLOBAL HEALTH
FREQUENT FLYER PLEDGE FORM

The UW Center for Global Health Frequent Flyer Pledge program allows members of the UW-Madison Health Science Community, Alumni and interested others to support the efforts of Health Science students or faculty who are interested in international work. The program grants travel awards in the form of airline tickets to recipients who have plans to travel to another country to participate in health-related education, service, or research activities. Awards may also be used to support US-based travel where the purpose of the trip is primarily international, such as presenting research at a global conference where international colleagues will be among the beneficiaries.

In pledging these miles I understand that I am forfeiting the ability to use them for my own travel. I understand that once an award recipient is selected by the Center Global Health, I will be asked to contact the airline to request that a ticket be issued in the traveler's name. I give the Center Global Health my permission to check my frequent flyer account(s) to verify mileage availability before making an award. I understand that the donation of these miles is not tax-deductible.
